The Lattice sensAI stack was named a Hot 100 Product in the "Tools & Development" category. The stack combines modular FPGA hardware kits, neural network accelerator IP cores, software tools, reference designs and custom design services for fast-tracking customer development of AI inferencing in edge devices for smart home, smart city, smart factory and smart car applications. The Lattice sensAI stack features ultra-low power consumption (under 1 mW–1 W), small package size (5.5 mm<sup>2</sup>–100 mm<sup>2</sup>), and interface flexibility (MIPI® CSI-2, LVDS, GigE, etc.), making it a compelling solution for bringing AI and ML compute capabilities to the millions of power and form factor sensitive devices operating at the network edge. Tractica forecasts that AI edge device shipments will increase from 161.4 million units in 2018 to 2.6 billion units worldwide annually by 2025.

"Lattice is thrilled our sensAI stack received this prestigious recognition from EDN," said Deepak Boppana, Senior Director of Segment and Solutions Marketing, Lattice Semiconductor. "It's a wonderful acknowledgment of the work Lattice and our partners have done to help customers quickly implement flexible, low power AI and ML capabilities in edge devices."

About Lattice Semiconductor

Lattice Semiconductor (NASDAQ: LSCC) is a leader in low power, small form factor programmable logic devices. Our FPGAs deliver intelligence, connectivity, and control solutions to the industrial, compute, communications, consumer, and automotive markets. Our unwavering commitment to our global customers enables them to accelerate their innovation, creating an even better and more connected world.
